GYLA — Protecting Human Rights since 1994

1 April - 31 July, 2026

We thank each contributor for their trust and support.

The Georgian Young Lawyers' Association continues to protect human rights, strategic litigation, and fight for the establishment of the rule of law.

During the four-month reporting period, the organization received a total of 3,950 GEL in donations and membership fees.

Every support is important and creates real change.

As a result of current restrictive regulations in Georgia, the organization no longer maintains any ongoing projects.

What were we able to achieve together during the four-month reporting period?

During the reporting period, GYLA prepared statements, assessments, responses, and research papers regarding ongoing key human rights issues, social, and legal processes in the country.

Through these activities, the organization continued to document human rights conditions, inform the public and international mechanisms, and monitor justice processes.

Legal Assistance and Consultation During the Reporting Period

1 April - 31 July, 2026

Despite the crisis and limited resources, providing free legal assistance remains one of the core directions of GYLA's work. The organization continues to conduct strategic litigation at local and international levels, which is particularly crucial in conditions of daily human rights violations.

Three new cases were submitted to the Strasbourg Court: The criminal case of Mzia Amaglobeli, The case regarding systemic torture, The case concerning the arrest of an individual for standing on a sidewalk

A response statement was submitted to the Strasbourg Court regarding the 2024 parliamentary elections.

Two new cases were submitted to the Constitutional Court: The case concerning the voting rights of emigrants, The case regarding protracted court proceedings in a civil case involving children's rights.

An Amicus Curiae brief was submitted to the Constitutional Court regarding the lawsuit demanding the ban of four political parties.

GYLA is litigating six new / ongoing criminal cases, including a case regarding the potential use of an experimental weapon involving chemical substances mixed into water cannons against demonstrators.

The organization provided over 50 consultations on various legal matters.

GYLA continued working on ongoing cases that were not finalized during the reporting period.
